

Why only distilled or deionized water?

Water that is not properly distilled or de-ionized is essentially not pure and may contain undesirable elements that can interfere with the final quality and effectiveness of a silver solution. It is also imperative that no "additives" be incorporated before, during or after the electrolysis process to ensure that only the pure elemental form of silver is present within the suspension of a pure H<sub>2</sub>O environment.

The harmless skin discoloration condition called "Argyria" has been linked to ingestion of improperly created silver solutions that were produced with salt or other ingredients added as a catalyst to decrease production time. Although adding salt may greatly reduce the time required to create a silver solution, it also produces the undesirable compound known as "silver chloride."

Many silver manufacturers incorporate proteins and citrates into their ionic solutions to allow for much great concentrations to be created. Virtually all cases of Argyria have been linked to consumption of these highly concentrated protein and citrate enriched solutions. We cannot recommend these products for safe nebulization or oral consumption due to the very large agglomerated particles that are inherent to their formation.

Keep in mind that distilled and de-ionized water is not equivalent to filtered, reverse osmosis, spring, well or mineral water. Distilled and de-ionized water means "pure" water absent of any minerals, additives, ions and impurities. "Berkey" type water filtration systems do not distill nor deionize water nor do "atmospheric" water generators. Again, distilled or deionized water only!
